El Puente

Natural

In 2018, Clearpath Coffee launched the El Puente project, establishing a washing station in Palestina, within the Huila region. The goal was to connect local small-scale farmers to the global specialty coffee market. Strategically positioned among numerous coffee farms, it simplifies cherry delivery. The initiative seeks to address the challenges faced by 214 small specialty coffee farmers in the region through various measures. These include purchasing freshly harvested cherries from local small-scale farmers, providing them with suitable infrastructure for drying and storing the coffee, paying them a price equivalent to that of dry coffee, processing the coffee for them, and connecting them with the right buyers worldwide. This underscores Clearpath's commitment to sustainability, favoring methods like natural and honey processing, which use 80% less water than washed coffees,
